Dear Ms. Pagenkopf:

In an article in the Missoulian, June 27, 1990, you were quoted on the dangers of taking overdoses of vitamins, including vitamin c ... I would appreciate it very much if you could answer the following question for me. As far as you know, would there be any risk in taking, say, 250 mg per day of vitamin C in addition to a al diet? Since I have to spend a lot of time out of doors, I be at greater risk than the average person of developing racts due to ultraviolet-induced oxidation of proteins in the eye ...

Dear Ms. Pagenkopf,

This is just a thank-you note to express my appreciation for your helpful reply to my recent question about vitamin C.

You kindly offer to answer further questions for me, and at some time in the ... may take advantage of your offer,

Thank you again.

Dear Mr. Kaszynski:

I am writing you in response to your letter of January 20, regarding your blood pressure readings. Dr. Joren states that it is normal to have blood pressure variation throughout the month and on a day to day basis. The fact that the range of your blood pressures were within an acceptable range, the appropriate your time and efforts in collecting such numbers and would suggest no change in therapy at this time.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Goren, M.D.

sentenced report on blood pressure.

Summer, 1993, my blood pressure was borderline. I was somewhat underweight, not having to keep the appointments, and the other was 142/82, but for this memory, and the numbers may not be accurate, they are or round at the end could be obtained if necessary, I took my own blood pressure at home (readings 118/76, 108/76 or 3:15 PM).

blood pressure again on January 7, 1994.

see you, for the first time, on letter I'd like to describe the I can commit it with less risk I can continue to be prepared in a second trip to Montana for tests. I am 45 years old. In my early thirties I had a heart attack under stress. I have frequently been in the hospital and I do not intend to have a heart attack in the next 5 or 6 years. I've been under more stress than most people. I've continued to have pressure tests, been performing various other tests. I've been in the hospital frequently for heart tests. I've had a heart attack.

Scientists have found a way to speed up DNA replication in test tubes, a discovery that could help researchers understand how DNA is copied in living cells.

Report warns
Plutonium

Plutonium is a highly radioactive element that is used in nuclear power plants and weapons. A report warns that the use of plutonium in nuclear power plants is increasing, and that this could lead to a significant increase in the amount of plutonium in the environment.
